

Please Note: The “listing order” on the next page is in the random order that it came to mind at the moment of writing. There is no priority implied between Matt Damon and Sir Richard Bronson, while Senator Carl Levin as a political leader, represents a different motivation.

Furthermore – the innovation excerpts presented on this website, are just that – a subset of “excerpts” from a larger pool of innovation solutions, functionalities, business models.

One reason why “my” innovation/entrepreneurial process confronted with the overwhelming obstacles – most “man-made”, some of which presented on this website – one reason my case may be unique from many others, is because of the nature of the innovation.

Without wanting or intending to diminish any existing stories of success – consider the “differences”: Google, Yahoo – are best search engines, better than their predecessors. Twitter, Facebook – social networking/communication leaders, but not due to any IP breakthrough enabling a “disruptor new way” that would require a “utility” innovation.

The Internet, on the other hand, is a “new way” that created value out of “nothing”, and had no term for comparison before it came out.

Similarly, what I’ve developed – is a “new way”, that creates value out of “nothing”, that cannot be accomplished without ingenuity/IP, and cannot be compared to any existing solutions. As such, it will enable new “realities” in term of solutions, results, business models, possibilities, ways of doing things.

For this reason, my road was not one similar to ringtones, and virtual gifts. My path was one where mid-level executives would run for the hills, rather than miss the golf weekends, to do the due diligence required for a “complete unknown”, to understand and elevate. Tech leaders were either completely overwhelmed by the exotic nature of Semantic Web – which just now is pushing into the main stream, while specific others felt so threatened that their own “innovation”/lead role in the field was threatened to become extinct/or no more, that they did everything to block, regardless of the best interests of their shareholders.

Business leaders – in organizations scoped/in positions to support innovation/entrepreneurs – were the first to try to “r...” and “p...”. After all, all it would take was for me to give up/and/or not have the resources to “fight” anymore, in order for my IP to become “someone else’s” domain. And, the fact is – considering what I had to go thru to get to “this” point – and “this” point in itself – the “beyond imagination” amount of work required for publishing the material on this website, under the hard-to-explain conditions of “pain” and stress, and the aggressive time-constraints I had to face each time I couldn’t work anymore after 30-50 hrs binges – it is a “miracle” I am able to take this “last” stand.

I ask you then – what other were the intentions of those on “my path”, as enumerated?

Is this the “innovation environment” reserved for the entrepreneur developing the real possibility of a “Next Big Idea”?

Finally, throughout the website, I’ve noticed mistakes/editing in nature – that I would consider unacceptable, especially considering the caliber of personalities I am addressing. However, everything here is in “draft” format...I barely had the time to correct “spelling”. Therefore, if you find shortcomings such as “mind” instead of “might”...please laugh at it, and consider the substance, and it’s all good. It is the best I could do for” right now”, and time is not on my side.

To Matt Damon, George Clooney: A while back, I've heard your story on CNN/I really respect what you're about, i.e., in addition to making movies. I would love to present to you "Betterment of Society" possibilities enabled by the invention + creative thinking. I am also interested to devote what is "mine" to such programs.

To Howard Stern: When I started developing my invention, I thought I might have a hard time breaking into the business world with the kind of apps I was envisioning - around year 2000. However, after seeing Private Parts - your movie inspired me to focus my first patent/demos, in the medical space, i.e., FSD. Considerations were that financing/success would be a given, and that would open the doors for the business applications of the technology - which today are considered futuristic and unbelievable - imagine in 2000? Howard - you mind find my previous invention/applications - technologically related to current - quite interesting and amusing. The "funny" thing is, the previous invention did not open the doors towards my first Nobel Prize in E-commerce, as I had planned. As a matter of fact, I think it slammed them sealed-shut :)

To Donald J. Trump: I have breakthrough solutions in the space of Real Estate - Cross Border/Language Independent + additional business spaces, which may be in your area of interest. If you would like to evaluate/consider a potential collaboration, mutually rewarding, please let me know?

To the "Advertising Industry": Mr. Daniel Applequist did not believe it possible that the Semantic Advertising solutions/functionality/applications as described and in some cases providing new advertising venues - are platform/device independent, requiring no client side installation, Web/WAP accessible. However, it is true - and I did send proof to support this fact, also supported earlier during Due Diligence in 2006, and through the source code entrusted to VF R&D in 2007, in order to help resolve outstanding issues.

To Metallica, Bon Jovi, Sean Combs, Eminem: If you are interested, my invention can allow for the business models and solutions, which may provide a "game-changer" with respect to a range of options, such as - enabling the consumer to participate - [through their cell phone, ..., in real time, interactively] - in the process of the artist developing in-tune with their audience + also enabling the artist to have some of the "gratification" issues that surfed with Napster "handled" to all concerned' satisfaction.

To Leading Personality - I forget the name - in the Effort to Eradicate "Bullying", i.e., in Schools: My innovation enables a market-wide solution to the problem. I am not looking to benefit from this - to the contrary, I will insist that all proceeds go to addressing the problem/victims/victim-prevention.

To Bono: I am aware that you like technology/revolutionary concepts - having invested in "Palm" if I am not mistaken? I will make you a gentleman's bet - the "Semantic ActiveNet" can be the most stimulating and rewarding opportunity, you will ever come across - even after "understanding it", you will not be able to find its "limitations". You will be able to obtain results to problems, where your mind will not be able to visualize the Use Case "at once", but rather in "sequential frames". This will be as a result of your/our 3D+1 "wiring" limitations.

To Mr. George Soros: Sir, if you consider what you see about me here, worth your time within the scope of betterment of society/civil society – I could really, really use your help...just about now.

To Sir Richard Bronson: I can propose an exciting business opportunity, within the scope of a global standard, regional nodes, global hub connecting the regional nodes for cross-border language independent functionality, an International Board of Directors in need of Trusted Directors to support the trust relationship required for the kind of solutions the innovation will enable, with civil society/betterment of society implications.

To Lady Gaga: Feel like helping:)?...for a good cause?

To Senator Carl Levin: My innovation enables a market-wide breakthrough in the space of Product Authentication, with respect to Problem/Solutions/Business Models. I do not wish to profit from this – I am ready and willing to have all that would be “mine” devoted to programs such as helping Veterans/their families cope with their “reality” after returning home, or “not” returning home.

To Whom it May Concern: If your name is not listed, but you are interested in the topics I am discussing, and you have power of impact comparable to those listed here, and after reviewing some key aspects about my “problems” right now – you do not “fear” the same things/people I fear right now – and you have your heart in the right place – then I would love to hear from you!

For more information, please contact:

Razz Van Serbanescu

Email: OMIBBBRO@Yahoo.com